THIS VOLUME OF THE
TRINITY IVY
IS RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED
BY THE CLASS OF 1907

"As a little sprig of ivy
Planted by the college wall
Ever reaches out its tendrils
Till at length it covers all,
So thy spirit, Alma Mater,
Planted once within our heart,
With its roots of old traditions
Which the years gone by impart,
Reaches to our souls its creepers,
Tendrils formed of love for thee,
Binding us to thee forever,
Loved and loving Trinity."

Greeting

The class of Nineteen Hundred and Seven extends its congratulations to its friends and acquaintances for their good fortune in being such. Knowing well their interest in the College as well as in this particular class, we take this opportunity of placing before them a record of the life at Trinity College as we have seen it during our three years' sojourn in Hartford " 'neath the elms" and 'neath the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

It is not possible in such small space to convey to the reader a complete picture of the many lights and shadows cast by those elms so well known in poetry and song; nor is it possible to give a detailed account of "T" and grooved rails, or other hobbies of the corporation guardian of the State of Connecticut.

We wish to convey, particularly, the news that we are still in existence as an integral part of this State. We are open to your inspection and have a cordial welcome for all comers. We thank you for courtesies of the past and trust you will be able to extend them into the future.

Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut.

THIS College was chartered by the State of Connecticut in 1823 in response to a petition presented to the General Assembly representing "that great advantages would accrue to the State, as well as to the general interests of literature and science, by establishing within the State another Collegiate Institution."

The College is governed by a self-perpetuating Board of Trustees, under a charter providing that the board "shall not make the religious tenets of any person a condition of admission to any privilege in the said College, and that no President or Professor, or other officer, shall be made ineligible for or by reason of any religious tenet that he may profess, or be compelled, by any By-Law or otherwise, to subscribe to any religious test whatsoever."

The College includes and has included among its Trustees, Faculty, and Students, men of many denominational affiliations. It is a generously equipped secular institution, religious in spirit and motive, its religious services conducted in harmony with the liturgical forms of the Protestant Episcopal Church; but it is not ecclesiastical and is controlled by no ecclesiastical organization.

The corps of instruction consists of sixteen professors and assistant professors, five instructors, a librarian, and a medical director.

COURSES OF INSTRUCTION.

The College offers four courses of instruction, viz.:

- I. A Course in Arts.
- II. A Course in Letters and Science.
- III. A Course in Science.
- IV. A Course in Letters.

The courses extend over four years. Students completing the Course of Arts receive the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Students completing the Course of Science receive the degree of Bachelor of Science, and those completing the Course in Letters receive the degree of Bachelor of Letters.

Students who do not propose to pursue all the studies of any of the regular courses may be permitted, under the name of special students, to attend any class in such studies as, upon examination, they are found qualified to pursue. Upon honorable dismissal, they are entitled to a certificate from the President, stating the studies which they have pursued.

A full course in civil engineering has been in operation for three years, and a course in sanitary engineering has just been established. In certain departments the college offers, also, instruction for graduate students. The departments of instruction in the College number twenty-five, including ninety-eight elective and voluntary courses.

THE PRINCIPLES OF INSTRUCTION.

The number of the teaching force, large relatively to the number of those taught, admits of a close relation between instructors and students. Each student is held accountable for his work every day, and receives personal encouragement and guidance to a degree impossible where the number of the taught is greater. Practical research and laboratory methods are applied wherever possible.

THE LIBRARY.

The College Library, numbering 50,000 volumes, is under the superintendence of a professional librarian, who guides the students in the use of books. They have also at their command the Watkinson Reference Library of 53,000 volumes, the Library of the Connecticut Historical Society, the Hartford Public Library with its well-stocked reading rooms, and the Case Memorial Library.

LABORATORIES AND OBSERVATORY.

The Jarvis Physical Laboratory contains, in addition to the lecture and apparatus rooms, a large laboratory for work in the elementary courses, a reference library and several smaller laboratories adapted and devoted to advanced work of a special character. The laboratory has a very complete equipment for work in all the branches of Physics. Special attention has been given to making the facilities for work in electricity as complete as possible. The department is provided with standard apparatus for electrical measurements, and has direct current and polyphase alternating current generators for its special use. There is also a workshop in which a limited number of students are instructed in the use of machine-tools.

The Jarvis Chemical Laboratory is well equipped for work in general experimental and organic chemistry, in qualitative and quantitative analysis, in assaying, and in gas analysis. The main laboratory has desk space for thirty students working at one time. This room is devoted to work in general experimental chemistry and qualitative analysis. For work in quantitative analysis and organic chemistry separate laboratories are provided and properly equipped. A room set apart for assaying is fitted up with suitable furnaces and other necessary material.

The Hall of Natural History contains biological, botanical, geological and mineralogical laboratories provided with every modern equipment.

The Observatory contains a six and a half inch refracting telescope, a two and a half inch transit, a standard clock, a chronograph, a small refractor, a portable transit, a sextant, and conveniences for the simpler work in astronomical photography.

The Gymnasium is supplied with the best apparatus, in the use of which the students are trained by a special instructor. A new athletic field, about nine acres in area, was recently completed at an expense of $10,000, contributed by friends and alumni of the college.

The Russell Fellowship, yielding about $400, is awarded biennially to a member of the graduating class of superior ability, who engages to pursue an approved course of graduate study at Trinity College or at some foreign university.

The Mary A. Terry Fellowship, endowed by a legacy from Miss Mary A. Terry, of Hartford, yields an annual income of about $500. It is awarded annually by the President, upon the recommendation of the Faculty, to a member of the graduating class who gives evidence of superior ability and who engages to pursue an approved course of graduate study at Trinity College or some other college or university approved by the Faculty.

The Holland scholarships, each having an annual value of $600, are awarded to the students attaining the highest rank in the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman classes respectively. Other prize scholarships, together with scholarship awarded on special conditions, are available for students of industry and ability. Special prizes amounting to $500 are annually offered in the several departments.

The amount of the Treasurer's bills each year varies from $177.50 to $242.50. Board can be obtained at $4.50 a week and upwards, making the cost of board for thirty-seven weeks, at the lowest rate, $166.50. The amount of the Treasurer's bills can be reduced to holders of scholarships.

The buildings of the college are situated on a site commanding beautiful views in the southern part of Hartford, itself one of the most beautiful cities of New England. The largest of the buildings, more than 650 feet in length, intended to form the west side of a great quadrangle, is of stone in the English secular-gothic style, and is one of the most notable collegiate buildings of the country. The Jarvis Laboratories, the Hall of Natural History, and the Gymnasium, are tasteful and commodious structures of brick. Six of the college fraternities have special chapter houses.

For catalogues apply to the President or to the Secretary of the Faculty.

About College.

Have you ever thought that history contains not only the actions and events of especial note, but also the feelings, and in fact, a part of the chronicler's own spiritual self? An incident of history appears to you through the mind's eye of the historian, as it were. If that eye be untrue, the painting you get will be false; though you none the wiser be. However, in this instance, we shall trust that the annalist's eye is true and his hand steady for the paint-brush wherewith to represent to you the events of the year, since the opening of college in the fall.

College opened on the twenty-eighth of September, at that mysterious hour of 5:45 p. m., with the usual chapel services. There was a goodly attendance of undergraduates, alumni, and friends, while about seventy-five bright, robust freshmen occupied the front seats. After the service came that exciting moment of running the gauntlet, followed by class yells and a small brush between the underclasses. Then the air was rent by a long "Trin." "'Neath the Elms" concluded the program.

At 3 p. m. on the ensuing day occurred the famous "Bulletin Board Rush." The freshies succeeded in posting their challenge to the class of 1908, for a push-rush; though the "Board" was torn down in the struggle. That evening the "push-rush" came off, ending in a draw. After that came the parade of classes to the State Capitol, the site of the old college. Here "Phil" Curtiss addressed the new men with a few words, pointing out the significance of the ceremony at hand. "America" and "'Neath the Elms" were sung. Later a reception was tendered the upperclasses by the freshmen.

On October the fifth, the Athletic Association ratified the new Constitution and By-Laws of the Athletic Association together with the Constitution and By-Laws of the Advisory Committee, both of which were passed last June. A resolution was also passed making twelve hours' work the requisite for all men desirous of playing on athletic teams.

After college was well started it took but little trouble to get the men out for football. Captain Landefeld acted as coach the whole season and though his material was not the best, certainly he made the most of it. The men worked hard and faithfully as the results show; Trinity winning three games, tying one, losing five and having one with no score. The Trinity-New York University game, the no-score game, was the most unsatisfactory game of the season. The New York players came to Hartford with the idea of a victory. This sentiment appeared the more strongly as the game progressed. The officials were poor and certainly this did not help matters. At several times it looked as if the game would end in a free-for-all fight. Great praise is deserving Captain Landefeld for the self control he displayed at several moments of the game. Of course the scandalous accounts of the game appeared in the New York papers were all bosh. Moreover, no sane-minded person would believe the truth of such statements for a second. The unpleasant taste left by this game was soon forgotten in the underclass affairs that followed.

The Sophs proved easy victors in the "underclass track meet," winning the meet by sixteen (16) points. In the underclass baseball game, the Freshies showed their ability by beating the Sophs by a score of 4-1; but the underclass football game resulted in a clean victory for the Sophs with a score of (6-0) six to nothing.

For a time after the close of the football season, one would hear "Heads out! Freshmen Junior Banquet!" The Sophs even offered to stay over night with the Freshies, but to this the Juniors objected. Time dragged on and still no banquet. Rumors finally spread that there would be no banquet. Alas! like all things, the eventful day arrived; the Freshies foiled the Sophs by leaving town Sunday afternoon, the day before the event. The "Banquet" took place at the Hotel Russwin, New Britain, Monday, the eighteenth of December.

During the past year, the German Club has given several delightful dances. The same plan being followed as last year; that is, having the first half of the evening a dance and the second half the german-proper. The "Sophomore Dining Club" has not been asleep (far from it) and have enjoyed themselves as of old. From all appearances, they promise to uphold the good fellowship and congeniality of the Club. We could not pass without saying at least a few words of praise for the very successful "Junior Week" and the magnificent "Prom." Indeed congratulations are due to the Prom Committee for their great success.

Along in December, President Luther was kept from active college work, on account of illness. However, after a short rest-trip he returned to us again.

The last great event, in the eyes of the Freshmen at least, is the St. Patrick's Day Banner-scrap. This year the Freshmen were the victors without a doubt, keeping up two banners on the campus the required length of time, and placing one on Memorial Arch. The usual parade was dispensed with.

This year the basket ball team has been terribly crippled by the loss of several of its strongest men. Nevertheless, there need be no complaint, for the men have worked diligently and hard, though defeat stared them in the face constantly.

The way things stand, it looks as if there would be a great change in track athletics and that the men would be trained more thoroughly than they have been previously. Furthermore, there is a good lot of material in college for a good track team.

Probably the most important event of the year was the "Sophomore Smoker" given to the College Faculty and Alumni, which was held in Alumni Hall on the evening of Monday, March the twenty-fifth, President Luther's birthday. Senator Frank L. Wilcox, of the class of '80, made a capital master of ceremonies. The speeches were good and the good fellowship exhibited certainly demands another smoker soon. All pipes were out and the punch bowl drained at 11:30 p. m., but the praise of the "1908 Smoker" lasted for many days afterwards.

Among the lecturers that have favored us this year are: Mr. Philip McCook '95, who spoke on the "Jerome Campaign;" Hon. Chas. Hopkins Clark, of the "Hartford Courant," who lectured on the "Philippines" (it will be remembered that Mr. Clark was one of the Secretary Taft-Party); Professor Bassett of Trinity College, Durham, North Carolina, spoke before the college body on "The Conditions in the South;" Rev. Henry C. McCook of Philadelphia gave a most interesting talk on "Spiders;" Professor Brooks of Hobart College delivered a lecture on "Other Worlds Than Ours" which was interesting and instructive. (Professor Brooks is an authority on comets; he himself having discovered twenty-five.) Dr. Charels Harrington of the Massachusetts State Board of Health, and Professor at the Harvard Medical School, has delivered a course of three lectures on "The Movement for Pure Food."

For the past few weeks all eyes have been riveted on Captain Powell and his men. Some say the base ball season will be a successful one, others prophesy an unsuccessful season. Nevertheless from the faith we have in the team's captain and from the way the team has been coming up in its playing, we trust that the "Bantam" will not be the one to be crowed over this season and that he will come out at the end of the season unscared.

Senior Class History, 1906.

It has been said that Seniors spend their time by dreaming of "pipes, ladies and champagne." However this may be, customs, traditions, ambitions, victories, defeats, all hang before our eyes like a mist. True, indeed, we have had our share of success, for we have had the honor of being a "Squeezer Class," and ours has been the privilege of giving one of the most successful Junior Proms in the history of the College. We have seen the inception of one of the best of college papers, The Trinity Tripod. Likewise we have beheld the rejuvenation of the Musical Clubs. In Athletics we have been represented on all the teams by the best men. Other members of the class have achieved distinction and honor as scholars. Such, in brief, is the record of the Class of 1906 during its four years of undergraduate life.

Reluctantly do we leave the campus, with its numerous associations, dear to each one of us, but, we bid farewell to the old scenes and go to our work in the great, throbbing world, imbued with the high ideals that have been taught us by our scholastic mother, "loved and loving Trinity."

JUNIOR

CLASS.

Junior Class History.

Pray reader when you scan these lines consider that they were not fashioned by an Herodotus; yet noble deeds like beautiful paintings need no gilded frames to set them off. So it is with the "History of Nineteen Hundred and Seven." He that knows it admires it: grand in its simplicity; great in its grandeur; powerful in its greatness; would that my pen could play upon this theme for e'er, but even at this moment Father Time is joggling my arm, so I must make haste.

I shall not sing of Noughty-seven's triumphs and victories, like the minstrel of old, nor boast of her prowess, strength and strategy. Read but the pages of this Ivy and you will see what a class of men she is. Those petty class affairs of our freshmen and sophomore years are trivial and need no mention here. And now as the most successful "Junior Week" is passed, our thoughts are on "Trinity." To her we owe a debt, part of which is due while we are still beneath her guiding hand and the rest, when we have left her halls, her grounds, and her associations and have gone out into the wide and busy world to solve our life problems. Look, reader, o'er these pages and judge whether nineteen hundred and seven has not done her duty, thus far, toward her fostering mother. You will answer in the affirmative. Why then need I say more? But let me dip my pen into the inky fluid and add:—May all Trinity's sons be as loyal to her as Nineteen Hundred and Seven has shown herself to be.

Sophomore.

— Class —

History of the Sophomore Class.

"History," said Gibbon, "is indeed little more than the register of crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind."

If this definition be true the Class of 1908 has no need of space in the Ivy. But knowing that such a view point would mean that the entire contents of this valuable volume—and many sequels—would have to be devoted to the record of the present freshmen class we feel justified in asserting that history has a different meaning than the misanthropic writer, already quoted, would lead us to suppose.

History is the chronicle of the righteous deeds of the mighty as well as of the vicious mistakes of the weak, and with this clear vision we modestly point to a few of our notable achievements during the past year which, as one writer has well expressed it, are now the common heritage of mankind.

"There is a force that works for righteousness," recently said Dr. Lyman Abbott in graceful recognition of our worth. Never has that force been more dominantly successful than during the year now gone. Over fifty-five fresh brands plucked from the burning and started, we trust, towards a better life. Is this a small consummation?

The Bulletin-Board Rush; the Freshmen-Junior Banquet; the St. Patrick Day episodes—these we leave to the Munchausens of the under-class. They, no doubt, will find a certain pleasure in magnifying trivial matters and distorting moral defeats into physical victories. But it seems to us a small thing that we have so successfully worsted the Freshmen class on the athletic field or within the gymnasium walls—that we have conquered it whenever questions had to be settled by force of arms—that we have dazzled it by our triumphs in the intellectual contests at which, with commendable, though often misdirected zeal they have encountered us. These we say, are not our boast.

It has always been the supreme function of the Sophomore Class to take the incoming boys and make of them men. Men who should be worthy to receive that honor of all honors—a degree from Trinity College. The present Junior Class, while they may have had the ability to do this, did not have the opportunity. As one of their number said in an address before the Alumni: "We thought to see the usual type of verdant youths entering college, but these fellows of 1908 were already men of most renowned virtue." But the Class of 1909 had no such halcyon outlook. True, beneath the rough exterior we could see the diamond gleam. That we have been able to make what we have of 1909 is our crowning glory.

There is much more that might be said, but is it not all writ large in the book of Golden Deeds?

We cannot refrain from a passing mention of the first Sophomore Smoker. It will be a proud day when, in the future, the President of our country with his cabinet as well as senators, governors and the leaders of the religious, legislative, literary and commercial worlds shall gather in Alumni Hall at a similar celebration and say: "We inaugurated this when we were Sophomores at Trinity in the Spring of 1906."

It is not our custom to give advice, we show by example, but we would say a final word:

Seniors:—You are going out into the world to struggle and achieve. You no longer can enjoy the close personal contact with us that for the past two years has been your help and stay. But remember that whenever defeat seems imminent the Class of 1908 stands waiting your call. We salute you.

Juniors:—You now are Seniors. You have our prayers.

The Class of 1909:—We bequeath you to Trinity. Think not that we have cast you off utterly. As Sophomores you will have many trials and often will you feel the need of wise and omnipotent counsel. Fear not to lay your troubles on the knees of the gods.

History is in the making and we, the CLASS OF 1908 accept the commission.

FRESHMAN

Class.

Freshman Class History.

The Class of 1909 is the largest that has entered Trinity since the founding of the College, and so it is needless to state that we are the best bunch of Freshmen that has ever been here. In proof of this statement, just glance over the list of things we have done, and note with what success everything has been carried on.

In the first place, when "Bloody Monday" came, we were right on the scene, and fought in the Bulletin Board Rush, which we won. In the Push Rush we proved a match for the class of 1908.

As far as athletics go, we seem to have made good in nearly every branch of sport. One Freshman holds the tennis championship of the college, and another of our illustrious class is runner up for the same. In the annual underclass baseball game 1909 was victorious to the tune of 4-1. When the track meet came, we were not quite so fortunate, but we surprised everyone by holding down the Sophomores in the football game to the score of six points against us. There were also three Freshmen who made their "T." Besides these, five other men of 1909 were on the Varsity football squad.

On December 19 came the long looked for banquet, given by 1909 to 1907. During the fall the Sophomores had been busy "pinching" the Freshmen that they thought were directly connected with the feast, and carrying them off to places remote from any banquet scene. But they acted too soon, and then grew tired of keeping such a strict watch, so we Freshmen went ahead with our plans, unmolested by 1908. Finally, just before vacation, we all stole off from the college to a neighboring town: the night before the event. On the next day the Juniors joined us, bearing accounts of the dismay in the Sophomore camp when it was found out that we had escaped. That evening the banquet was held. Not only did 1909 do her full share, but 1907 also helped just as much to make the affair a success, by the kind and friendly feelings shown by them to the Freshmen.

The next event that brought fame to 1909 was the St. Patrick's Day celebrations. Although the snow lay deep on the ground, and the air was raw and cold, we managed to "put it all over" the Sophomores, to use an expressive phrase. On St. Patrick's eve we assembled down town, and spent the dark hours in decorating (?) telegraph poles, fences and buildings with our famous posters. When this business was finished, we marched to a comfortable resting place, where we slept soundly (?). Two hours after midnight, under the guidance of our Class President, Maxson, a chosen few preceeded to Memorial Arch, where, having gained access by a duplicate key, they began to string up the glorious banner: "19To9." Here our president proved to be a valuable man indeed, and it was through his untiring efforts, that the flag finally flew on the famous monument. A couple of fellows were left in the tower to watch the banner, and take care that no harm was done by flying brickbats and sky-rockets.

On the campus the next morning the Freshmen were so completely victorious that it seems a shame to mention the battle. By the quickness and agility of Rich and Cadman, two small banners were soon perched on the electric light poles, and try as they would, 1908 could not come within reach of them. The fight that ensued was a fierce one, indeed, and for days afterwards the campus resembled a scene of carnage.

Chiefly, the credit for our victory must be given to our class president, who, by his care and consideration of every detail, and by his perseverance and cheerful spirit, urged on the Freshmen to success. Then too, the class songs, composed for the occasion, were greatly beneficial, and did a good deal towards inspiring us with class and college spirit, which will surely remain with us during our college life, and prompt us to perform our duty and service to our Alma Mater.

Naught-eight, you'll have to march, march, march,
Naught-eight, you'll have to march;
Every doggie has its day,
And yours has passed away,
Naught-eight you'll have to go.
Put all your bullies in, in, in,
Play all the tricks you know,
Oh, naughty-eight, you're on the blink, and on the blink you'll stay.
Naughty-eight, you'll have to go, go, go.

In Memoriam

The editors of the Ivy of the class of 1907 cannot leave their work without some tribute to the memory of their classmate, Louis Milton Ensign. With the promise of a brilliant future before him; beloved by his fellow classmates and respected for his ability, he was taken from our midst before the close of his first year in college. His untimely death is still lamented by all who knew him. At this time, therefore, we wish to record our feeling of satisfaction in the privilege we had of knowing him; our sorrow at his loss and the respect we feel for his memory.

Over the green baize of the bridge table, on tennis court and ball ground, in recitation room and on the walk, from all quarters of the heavens, whither away we know not, have come from time immemorial divers quipps and jests. A few of the subtle truths which have thus found their way from the dark corners of college life into the daylight of the same are herein contained.

Do you know they do say "Bill" Biller has grown an inch during his college course? No, "Bill" never made the Glee Club.

Have you seen "Percy" lately? Yes, "Percy" Bryant. No? Well, what do you think? He has given up his ideas of going into the ministry. Oh, my, yes, he did once, you know, but now he's specializing in electro-phussestry. Yes, indeed, he is thinking of trying to get his Ph.M. from Oxford.

N. B.—Carl says he didn't dare go into the ministry because of his wind-sor locks. We admire his modest and retiring disposition and sincerely trust his curls may yet entwine themselves around the affections of some fascinating maid.—[Ed.]

What! You never knew Chamberlain? Why, "Weary" was "Bus. Man." of the Ivy. Sure, he used to trot all over Hartford with an Ivy under his arm trying to get "ads." He used to try to get one for the Ivy first, then he'd try the Tablet and finally, by way of professional courtesy, he'd make an attempt to get one for the Tripod. "Weary" always was a persistent youth. For many years he persisted in living in West Haven; then he persisted in going to college. At college he persisted in playing basketball, managing things, sleeping and cutting recitations. His motto is "Eat, drink and be persistent, for to-morrow we die."

Oh yes, you mean Cunningham. He's still around. Been playing base ball this year. As soon as he was elected treasurer of the Athletic Association they let him play ball. They were afraid he'd cancel all the games if they didn't. But, you know base ball isn't the only game "Jay" plays. Gracious, no, he's been dabbling in things far more subtle than were physical contests. He would do well to remember that according to Virgil, and the statement has never been refuted, "Varium et mutabile semper femina." Wouldn't it be grand if one could only gather together all the bright things Gerald has said since he entered Trinity? And then, he's always so willing to do things without waiting to be asked. Many a time Professor Urban has had to suspend recitation while "Cunny" explained the lecture to Paul Smith. "Cunny's" greatest vice is cutting lectures when he has a paper to read before the class. It is clear that Gerald's path to fame is fast being mapped out, — not by the surveying class, we hope. Anyway it will doubtless be a capital avenue when it's done.

Why, there's "Phil." Now, where do you suppose he's going? Eh, what's his name? Why, of course, you see there's so much to be said on both sides of the question. His name is properly spelled D-o-u-g-h-e-r-t-y, but it is pronounced in a variety of ways. If you're from Boston you should say "Do—her—tee." Most unpedantic people call him Dôrêty, but this is varied by Dockety, etc., etc. Sure, he's an athlete. He's captain of our football team. Professional? O yes, the faculty make a practice of giving him three hundred dollars a year just to keep him in college. He can't help that though. If the professors will persist in marking him ninety-nine on the scale of a hundred, what can he do? "Phil" is delightful company when he leaves his "grouch" behind him. "Dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo."

By the way [Ed.] you remember M. S. Dravo. Yen, the fellow who wore his hair pompadour. He plays base ball, dances and fusses. Once somebody caught "Red" studying "Quoth the Raven Never More." Stew-Piety I. Pittsburg is his native town. He lives to vindicate that much slandered place. Nobody after once seeing Dravo (Prof. J-s-n calls him Dráyö) would ever believe that antiquated fiction about people becoming black from Pittsburg smoke. "O fons Bandusiae, splendor vitro."

See that fellow over there? That's Fairbrother; Benjamin Henry. "Benny" joined the Athletic Association just to show his college spirit and then refused the presidency because he thought it might necessitate a little more work. Do you know, they tell me that nobody ever works in Waterbury. No, indeed, they are all floaters over there.

"How, now, my lord? Why do you keep alone,
Of corriest fancies your companions making."

Well, well, if that isn't "Sam" Fallow. "Sam" is a great fusser. He fusses five days each week and sleeps the rest of the time. Fallow got twisted up about recitations when the new cut system went into force. He thought you had to have an excuse to attend recitations. It required several conferences down in "13 Seabury" to bring him out of his lethargy. Early in life "Sam" started to run. He won a race once, but constant association with "Skinny" Guilfoil weaned him from his fast habits and he's now plodding slowly on. It is to be hoped that he ploddeth sure though slow. You never see "Fal" without "Jack." They are in evidence at all dog fights but seldom seen in chapel or recitations.

Did you ever hear that Fallow took a prize? Honest and true, he did. But, then, that shouldn't be laid up against him since he has turned over a new leaf. "Let the dead past bury its dead."

That reminds me. "Honest John" is around. He's going to write an ode to the memory of Prof. J-s-n. They always did get on beautifully together. You see their tastes ran in very similar channels and what "Furry" John didn't know about English the Professor did. It has been rumored that John Furrer was the real cause of Prof. J-s-n's resignation. Of course, you understand, I don't want you to repeat this as coming from me, but they do say it is true.

Grafting, did you say? Well, have you seen George's new jersey and pocket knife? Where did he get it? "Muggsy McGraw" ain't a-goin' ter tell. Sure, "Gene" is a fusser. He got into trouble one night. I don't know whether it is true or not, but they tell me that one night when he was out all alone a great big girl chased him for nearly a mile. My, but he was scared. Even the manager of a base ball team is human I suppose, but I'll tell you one thing, they never look it.

I don't just seem to remember him; unless you mean Guilfoil. Oh, yes, I remember him. Psychologically speaking, "Skinny" is the Threshold of Sensation; 1-10,000 millimeter less and you couldn't sense him at all. In fact, you know they're so afraid of losing him that his folks won't let him go out at night. He studies something awful.

Twinkle, twinkle little star,
How I wonder what you are,
Up above the world so high
Like an X-ray in the sky.

No, indeed, "Skinny" isn't the only thin man in the class. There's Hedrick, too. "Fred" tried for the class base ball team and the Tripod. He made the Tripod. Whenever Mr. Hedrick of Florida wants to go on a spree he takes a couple of hours off and wins a prize. His weakness in this line is really pathetic. "Fred" is always "Johnny-on-the-spot" and always the last man in chapel. He has the science of eating breakfast and making chapel in 120 seconds down to a T. L'exactitude est la politesse des rois.

No, "Bill" Licht does not pronounce his name "Lickt." I'll bet you he doesn't. What? Why, "Light" of course. "Bill's" strongest point is taking care of the fair demoiselles of Hartford. Wherever you see "Bill" just listen for that sinuous rustle of a petticoat. Incidentally, look at "Bill" closely, whenever you see him starting out on a fussing-bee and if he has forgotten to tie his neck-tie tell him about it. Don't let him go on his way as Bryant did in his freshman year. Say fellows, can't you just feel "Bill's" sadness when he found out he had been calling on his lady-love with his dress-tie tied fore-in-hand? It was all over Hartford in a week that it was the new style. Well, "Bill" comes from Geneva, N. Y. What more could you expect? O tempora, O mores!

Say, do you know the difference between Moody and Myers? No? Well, I'll tell you. One has black hair and the other red. Other than this they are essentially and ethically the same. Each is a regular Adonis and each has a smile likened by some to the lustre on the golden gates of heaven. Of course, you understand that no two men are exactly alike.

Consequently Moody joined the track team while Myers wrote the Ivy; that is, he wrote all the Board would let him.

Moody spells his name differently from Myers, but this can hardly be laid up against either of them. It is doubtless a mistake, but probably Andrew Carnegie will be able to rectify the error. It is thought that Moody is on the Ivy Board, but in order to dispell the illusion he carefully avoids attending any meetings.

N. B.—He isn't alone in his misery.—[Ed.]

Rathbone, did you say? Well, you know he is the only man in college who never did or said a funny thing. Alas, tempus fugit, we are informed that Rathbone is trying to learn to dance. Doubtless from now on Melvin will furnish funnycisms allegretto ad lib.

Who is "Rex?" Why, Reginald Ironside Spier, alias "Steelflank." Here's what the college has done for him.

WHEREAS, We have for three years been blessed with the presence of "Steelflanks" in our midst, and,

WHEREAS, Our friend and classmate has a voice of superb quality, and,

WHEREAS, We, his friends and classmates have at various times and upon divers occasions heard him sing, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, to him, do extend our hearty felicitations and thrice hearty gratitude for his great modesty exhibited in the fact that he never tried for the Glee Club, and be it further

Resolved, That we, his friends and classmates, do consider it our good fortune to have heard him sing. And be it still further

Resolved, That we, those same friends and classmates, do hereby petition and beseech our esteemed friend and classmate never to try for the Glee Club and to refrain from singing outside of chapel, in the future.

For the College,

A Friend.

You know Thompson, don't you? No, I don't. What you say, no one ever gossips about him? Well, if that's true Hartford is no place for him.

My Classes

Piety II.

Each Monday morn, with gladsome heart
I hurry on my way.
I do not stop to waste in talk
The precious minutes on the walk,
Nor join the merry play.
But up the stairs I run in glee
For there awaits me, Piety.

I hear about the dirty tramp
And learn the worth of pork.
I find that Hartford's east side dives
Could at their own game quite surprise
The worst dens in New York.
There other things that I've discovered
Perhaps were better left uncovered.

These few are but a little part
Of all the things I learn.
As how to tell the age of rum, —
Drink it yourself, or treat a bum, —
Or what makes iron burn.
And still it does seem strange to me
That I have flunked my Piety.

The Glee Club in New York.

Some philosopher, who is versed in collegiate lore, once observed that a Trinity man isn't always good but he is always wise. It is true—no one could have seen the deportment of our manly boys in the pulsing metropolis and doubted it. This was how it began. Chandler, swinging through the door of the Grand Central Station, happened casually to notice the Hotel Belmont. Now he had never seen anything higher than a seven story boarding house before—but did he give himself away? Not a bit of it. He leaned back and slowly kept raising his eyes and just as slowly fell over backwards. A green man would have done this precipitously. Meanwhile Cunningham had persuaded a reluctant policeman that Watertown on Saturday night was busier than Siegel-Cooper's on Christmas Eve. Rich, realizing the limitation of his Auburn extraction, determined to personally purchase a ten cent shine. Proudly seated on his dime pedestal he coolly watched his relatives and friends vanish from sight. De Mauriac, being the leader of the Mandolin Club, felt that much rested upon his shoulders. He fully understood the impatience of the Brooklyn public to hear him discourse sweet music and was seen clinging expectantly to the doors of the auditorium six hours before the posters announcing the concert were printed. Xanders, an experienced traveler, who has stopped at the Waldorf Astoria (in Broken Bow, Neb.) tried the European plan. Upon purchasing his lunch from a perambulating vegetarian hotel the Italian landlord remarked "Cheap a de sport." Credit must be given to Maercklein for a striking exhibition of originality. He became possessed with the idea that taking an East River ferry was a poor hackneyed way of going to Brooklyn. So he went over to the North River and perched himself coyly on the poop of a Red Star Line steamer. Here a real difficulty presented itself—the captain refused to sail to Brooklyn. Nothing daunted Maercklein went ashore and confidentially asked a policeman the way to Brooklyn. The officer looked him over and said, "Young feller, quit your kiddin." Our hero was almost discouraged, but he remembered having heard it said that an animal's instinct is a sure guide. He decided to trust himself to the care of two reliable looking old horses who were hauling a car. He jumped aboard and asked the jockey if the car went to Brooklyn. "Me boy, this is a belt line car and goes to all ferries." Sooner than show his ignorance the plucky musician rode thrice round the city at the rate of two miles an hour not counting stops. Then he went over the bridge on foot. The only man who made a real mistake was Randall. He took it for granted that the metropolitan public was well informed on current events. So went up to the first public building he saw and asked if there was going to be a concert there that night. On being told "Yes" he left his baggage there only to find out later that it was a Y. W. C. A. building and they had mistaken him for a boy soprano.

Eternal Youth.

College years of gladsome work,
Years that seemed to pass as days,
Must we lose them now that we
Have reached the parting of the ways?

No longer boys, but men, we face,
A world to us as yet unknown,
With man's resolve and youth's light heart
We leave our dear old college home.

And shall it be in this new life
All bonds of brotherhood must end;
Each man stand friendless in the strife,
No comrade to defend?

No—struggling in life's bitter fray
Our hearts shall learn at last the truth,
Love of humanity and hope,
Give us eternal youth!

—C. E. C.

St. Valentine.

Ah, no! I cannot sing your praise
My Lady Fair, in charming lays,
For I have not the poet's art
To tell the thoughts which in my heart,
Make me to wish that you were mine.
But this I know, if nothing more,
You are the one whom I adore,
So be my Valentine.
And I know, too, the sun's bright glare
Was never brighter than your hair;
The blue that comes in autumn skies
Grows pale besides your gentle eyes,
And so forevermore, i'll pine,
If you are not my Valentine.

Prof. Mc-k (after lecturing for 30 minutes in German to his class on Der Verein and its advantages)—Do you understand?

Class (in unison)—Yes, you're president and it costs five dollars to join.

Ici On Parle Francais.

(A comedy in one act.)

TIME — 10:45 Wednesday Morning.

PLACE — Seabury Hall.

CAST.

DR. M-N, a professor.

POND, an illustrious example of successful industry.

CORBETT, understudy to Pond.

BUTHS, a somnambulist.

WILLOUGHBY, an earnest worker.

ELWELL, an earnest bluffer.

HAMERSLEY, an anonymous contributor to "Fraser and Squair."

TAYLOR, a wag.

GEER, an occasional visitor.

The scene opens with all present but Geer.

DR. M-N.—Well, now, gentlemen, it causes a remarkable thrill of pleasure to course through my system when I behold you assembled before me this morning. Mr. Pond, will you read rapidly with great accuracy? (POND fulfills these conditions.)

TAYLOR—Did you write the book?

DR. M-N.—Mr. Pond has the same extraordinary success with French that he exhibits in capturing and taming the restive basketball.

WILLOUGHBY (philosophically)—What is success?

TAYLOR—Cherchez dans la grammaire "Fraser et Squair."

(Enter GEER.)

DR. M-N.—Why were you late, Mr. Geer?

GEER—I was detained by a long-distance telephone message about some important business.

DR. M-N.—Well, now, Mr. Geer, if your business is so important that it exacts such a tremendous number of absences perhaps you had better devote the rest of your remarkable life to it, and sever your connection with this institution. The next, quickly.

CORBETT (reading)—"She replied that she was English and that she knew how to behave herself——"

DR. M-N.—By the way, did any of you gentlemen ever notice the profound difference between the rendering of Mr. Corbett and the conversation of our worthy and estimable Michael? The next.

VOICE IN REAR—Wake up, Tubby!

BUTHS (yawning)—Where is it? Oh, I know. (Reading.) "It was an islander from Corfu——"

DR. M-N.—Where is Corfu?

HAMERSLEY (hopefully)—In Austria, sir.

ELWELL (smugly)—In Norway, sir.

DR. M-N.—Horrible, most horrible. Mr. Elwell, look in "Le Petit Larousse." By the way, can any gentlemen tell me how and when this exceptional book was published?

TAYLOR—Yes, sir, with great accuracy, in 1902.

DR. M-N.—Mr. Taylor, if you devoted yourself to the perusal of the peculiarities of the French language it would give me great pleasure. (Opening "Le Petit Larousse.") Here is Persia. Now, by the way, I am reminded of when I took a bicycle trip through that delightful land. Are any of you familiar with that Sanskrit epigram? (Quotes.) Ah, Mr. Pond, I am glad to find that you recognize it. That reminds me of the remarkable effort I once made to kiss the Blarney Stone——

HAMERSLEY—What's the lesson for next time, doctor?

DR. M-N.—Well, now, gentlemen, I feel that we have made great progress. For to-morrow we'll take the rest of the book.

TAYLOR—We've had that lesson twice.

DR. M-N.—For grammar work we will take all the irregular verbs and all the syntax in the book, and for Monday the entire subject of French literature.

CHORUS—That's too much, doctor.

DR. M-N.—Well, I feel that we have made great progress and for to-morrow we will do as much as possible.

(They go out one by one five minutes after the hour. A subdued voice is heard asking whether this course counts six hours.)

CURTAIN.

A Poem.

BY EDWARD S. VAN ZILE.

I.

Ye have seen, of the suns that shimmer
Like dew on the meads of night,
That never a star groweth dimmer,
Nor changeth before our sight.

II.

But ever a sun is waning,
As brighter its gleam hath grown;
'Tis losing its light or gaining
A glory it hath not known.

III.

A star or a soul or a nation —
The law is the same for all;
Though change to a new creation,
Through strife to a rise or fall.

IV.

Cometh the voice of the coward,
Who saith to a sun: "Decline!"
To a people: "Go not forward!"
To the soul of a man: "Repine!"

V.

Woven of fear and despairing,
The warp and woof of decay,
Shame for the garb ye are wearing
And shame for the words ye say!

VI.

Ye cry to a nation gaining
New strength from a mighty task:
"Turnback, for the light is waning!"
And "What of the night?" ye ask.

VII.

Hark, through the centuries mourning,
The sob of the same despair!
"Come back! Come back!" 'This the groaning
Of the futile, everywhere.

VIII.

The shore of the unsoiled ocean
Has seen their soul's unrest,
As they wept for ships in motion,
White wings on the purple west.

IX.

"We'll sleep with our fathers, dying
In peace in a land of peace;
Oh, fools, in those wild ships flying
Afar for the Golden Fleece!"

X.

But never do heroes listen,
And never the race shall rest;
Forever beyond us glisten
The stars that shall light our quest.

XI.

Not for the bauble of Treasure,
Not for the bubble of Fame,
Not for perilous Pleasure —
In that there were only shame! —

XII.

But for this, that life grow brighter
For song that free men shall sing;
The clouds of the East hang lighter
For wind that the West shall bring.

XIII.

The Word and the Deed are closing,
The soul of them both is one;
'Wake from your drugs and your dozing,
Ye of the lands of the sun!

XIV.

'Wake, for the future is crying
Only to ye that are men ;
'Wake, for the old evils dying
Turn evils to blessings again !

XV.

And ye who moan by the ocean,
Weeping, and wiping your eyes,
Know that our armies in motion
March to the song of the skies.

XVI.

March to a marvelous chorus,
Falling and rising again ;
Sweet to our fathers before us,
But never as now unto men.

Night.

Sad night once more has caught
Within her gloomy realms our wandering sphere.
Her borderlands are far to east and west,
Nor do the trembling stars bring memory near,
Nor yet the moon, whose ashen light grows dim with fear.

Man sleeps and beasts unmindful take their rest.
But from the wondering Ocean comes a quivering cry,
The forest moans and mountains echo sobs,
Nor once again does Nature tranquil lie
'Till some far gazing peak can day's outpost descry.

RALPH WOLFE.

Some Reminiscences of the Far East.

[When a very young man Mr. Honey had an extended experience as an engineer in the Far East. Many of his friends have, from time to time, requested that he put some of his reminiscences in a tangible form for their benefit. Upon request, Mr. Honey has consented to do this for the "1907 Ivy". It is with no small amount of pleasure that we print the sketch given below.]—Ed.

The word reminiscence, meaning the recalling of past experience, aptly defines the purport of these recollections, so entirely do they belong to the India of a past generation.

To begin with, the manner of approach to the East in those days when the Suez canal was in process of construction, but not quite ready for traffic, the route was more roundabout, than the travel of to-day. The start was made from Southampton for Alexandria, via Gibraltar and Malta; to-day the journey is via Brindisi by rail across Europe, thus avoiding the long Mediterranean route. But the steamship line, the well known and leading Peninsula and Oriental Company out of Great Britain for the Far East, is the same that crosses those waters to-day, and carries the English mail to India and Australia.

The four weeks of the journey of that time are now shortened to three, owing to the greater speed capacity of the modern marine engine, and to the shorter route.

The chief interest of the original trip was the stop made at Alexandria and Cairo, which afforded a sight of those curios of old world life. Cairo, the modern capital and metropolis, has the more beautiful location, and it's chief attraction in those days, as now, was it's marvellous Mohammedan architecture, characterized by the historic horseshoe arch and delicately carved dome and minaret, which marked the beauty of it's lofty towers, and hundreds of mosques and palaces. In those days Cairo boasted but one hotel, the well known "Shepherds", but time has brought the modern hostelry in competitive variety.

It was on this sojourn that I visited the Great Pyramid, making the distance of ten miles from Cairo on the back of a big Egyptian donkey, with whom I crossed the Nile in a sailboat. There is no record to the effect that this pyramid wonder of Egypt has altered—like so much else—with the lapse of time. In this era of the world, it still remains the same. Four hundred and seventy feet high and covering an area of thirteen acres, it stands upon a plateau one hundred and thirty feet above the Nile, so that when you are upon the top of this wonderful structure you overlook that famous river at a height of six hundred feet. To see the sun rise from this point is an experience that leaves in the memory an impression of such color as only a Turner could reproduce. But to obtain this view involved an experience not so agreeable,—that of being alternately dragged and boosted up the rough and precipitous sides, by four athletic Arabs, whose limber legs were well practiced in the feat of scaling the dangerous steep, and as nimbly descending. The smooth surface-stone of the Pyramid, originally impossible of ascent,—since it inclines at an angle of about fifty degrees,—had been somewhat removed for the construction of monuments, in and about Cairo, thus leaving the steps, about two hundred in number, and each as high as a table, to be laboriously scaled by the ambitious tourist. The Great Pyramid is perfectly orientated, i. e., its four sides face the cardinal points. The entrance passage, on the north side, is situated exactly in the plane of the meridian, and it is believed by some, that this passage at the time of its building pointed toward a certain star, by which the age of the structure is supposedly determined. From the foot of the great structure was obtainable an excellent view of its smaller companion pyramids, and of the mysterious Sphinx, one hundred and sixty feet long, with the head of a man and the body of a lion; and between its massive paws, a temple buried in sand.

Continuing our way to India, we crossed Egypt by rail, a hot and tiresome journey of two hundred miles over desert sands, and embarked from Suez for Bombay. Suez in those days was nothing but a hotel and a bazaar. Then followed four or five days in the Red Sea, in the intense heat of the month of August, when the mercury, under the double awnings of the ship's deck, rose to the 100 degree mark.

We passed the straits of Babel Mandeb,—commonly called by sailors "The Gates of Hell",—the temperature of the Red Sea region being justly regarded as infernal. When Bombay is reached, one is in the most cosmopolitan city in the world,—save perhaps Constantinople,—for on account of its geographical position, it receives representatives from all quarters of the globe. The Bombay Presidency and Bombay city, are still the land of the Parsee, so ineffaceable is the mark left upon their history by this last remnant of the great region of Zoroaster. The Parsee was the great merchant of India; and on account of his great service which he had rendered to the trade of India in those days, Jamsetji Jijibhai, was knighted by her majesty the Queen; and some of the Parsees held high positions in the civil service.

The religion of these people contains many elements of beauty and devotion, and their great reverence for the dead is still marked by their historic burial places, called the "Towers of Silence," at the foot of Malabar Hill. The British government exhibited great discretion in a policy of non-interference with the numerous native religions, and especially with regard to the Parsee. Like all stable institutions the government is hampered by few rules, but these are rigorously enforced, and at this time, in the service of the English government in India, I received but one injunction as to conduct while in the land of the Parsee,—and this,—on no account to speak to the natives on the subject of their religion or to shoot or harm their sacred bird, the vulture, which consumes the bodies of their dead. Not long after my arrival in Bombay, one of these sacred birds,—very objectionable as companions,—invaded my room while I was dressing, but we did not molest each other; I was too much alive to be a convenient article of diet for him, and my instructions to respect his sacred person insured his safety from attack on my part.

While the Parsee was a very interesting and important factor in Bombay life, yet numerically his consequence was small, as he constituted but a fractional part of the native population, which was mainly Hindu and Mohammedan. The history of India has been largely a conflict between the Mohammedan and Hindu forces, but the conquering Mohammedan race found its influence sufficiently weakened in the struggle, to make easier and plainer the way of British supremacy. India's population of three hundred millions today, shows two hundred and twenty-five million Hindus to sixty-five million Mohammedans, roughly estimated; about eight million followers of Buddha, and Christians to the number of one per cent. of the entire population. The differences between these two types, the Mohammedan and the Hindu, are very marked. The Mohammedan, as I saw him, was an active worker in the government service, a good citizen, amenable to the law; fanatical of course, as he is throughout the world, but a temperate and devout follower of Allah. The Hindu was the more interesting of the two types,—highly cultivated, urbane, polite and hospitable in the high classes, supplying the literary and cultivated element of the country. The numbers of castes among the Hindus have never been estimated, for every trade and occupation had its representatives. The highest caste,—that of the Brahmins or priests,—versed as they are in philosophy, Brahmin theology, literature, astronomy, medicine, music, and the law. The Hindu castes were roughly divided into three groups—the priestly, the military, and the merchant. In domestic service the various grades were uncertain and confusing, and every representative was a strict specialist in his line. The man who brought the water for your bath would not cook your dinner, and the Hindu barber who shaved his client in bed in the morning made this his specialty.

Life in this tropical Orient, that has come under the dominance of "western civilization," was full of a peculiar charm and fascination, despite a climate that is a menace to the Anglo-Saxon constitution, for nowhere is the trite saying that the worth of living "depends upon the liver," more applicable than in the East. Attendance by a body servant who begins his ministrations at an early hour by serving "Sahib" with coffee under "Sahib's" mosquito netting, was soon followed by the native barber who shaved his indolent subject in bed. Then came the boy who escorted "Sahib" to his bath and supervised his toilet; after which the Anglo-Saxon,—who in his own healthy country would be actively stretching his legs,—lay lazily about, smoking Burmah cheroots and perhaps drinking brandy and soda before breakfast.

The enervating pastime of being carried about in a palanquin, which was brought into one's bedroom, with dusky natives to "run apace"; the representative of a "superior race" squatting comfortably inside, the shining legs of the Hindu carriers glistening in the tropical sun,—all this was hardly stimulating to the liver in any sense. In Bombay the air from the sea greatly moderates tropical temperature and affords the sea bath, a delightful refreshment and stimulant; but we were careful to look alive for sharks, which, if time has not altered their proclivities, are only too active in those waters and regard white legs as a special delicacy.

Society in Bombay was largely military. In the afternoon the band played and all classes turned to listen and to promenade. In the hot season tents substituted the bungalow as dwellings, an unconventional condition of existence that amply bore out the fullest realization of the "simple life."

The meaning of the Hindu "Bambai,"—good harbor,—indicates its greater advantages of climate compared to Calcutta, the chief commercial center of Asia. The many attractions of this capital of British India, with its beautiful residences of the native princes, who are compelled to live in plain sight of British suzerainty; its famous Sanscrit college, the University, the arsenal and government house,—these advantages are qualified by the miasmic influences of the "sacred river."

By reason of their nature all "reminiscences" are inevitably somewhat rambling in character, for they rise before the memory in their own erratic fashion and thus preclude the sequence of the connected narrative to which they bear little relation.

A protracted stay in the Eastern tropics renders life elsewhere,—in cooler latitudes,—almost impossible. The influence of Eastern habits and customs upon the general temperament and general make-up of the European, together with the intense heat in its effect upon the physical condition, combine toward an unfitness for any other than an Eastern life. Such was my observation of men who had lived there from twenty to thirty years. These conclusions, together with other reasons for wishing myself in a more wholesome and stimulating environment, influenced me to resign my government work as marine engineer and to set my face westward again.

FREDERIC R. HONEY. .

Prof. J-s-n (to Furrer)—Wake up, Chick; fire wants poking.

Prof. U-b-n—Mr. Curtiss, you meant the North had more homogeneity for heterogeneity of action, did you not?

Curtiss—Maybe.

My Walk.

I.

I took a walk with you to-day ;
It does not matter where we went,
It's quite enough to know I spent
Three fleeting hours, in sweet content,
With you.

II.

I took a walk with you to-day ;
It does not matter what we said,
Nor where the path we followed led,
I only know the hours sped,
With you.

III.

I took a walk with you to-day ;
My life was turned from darkest night,
To golden sunshine clear and bright,
And so I know I'm happy, quite,
With you.

—W. S. W. FISKE '06.

Page upon page, here a little and there a little; mighty of stature am I; and of jovial disposition. My cheeks are like the ruddy glow of yon eastern sunset. My eyes are of that limpid green, a truly wondrous hue. No, no, my friends, I am not a rhinoceros, nor am I a rabbit, but in very truth a sophomore. Scarce can I believe that but one short year has sped since I, a freshman of verdancy unique, first pastured in this bay. But those are days long since forgotten. Behold me now, a man. Tennis, fussing, writing, talking and a score of other things; all these are but as children's play to me. Far more serious problems do I ponder on and solve. 'Twas I who first discovered Japan, beyond the sea. 'Twas I who first discovered the faculty's rule of five and made probationers happy during their brief stay within our happy sphere. Even so, a host of things I've done. It is, in truth, no small pity, I have been hindered by upperclassmen in my tasks. Truly it is most evident I'm a page of history. From a little leaflet grown through ages fresh and youthful to the more dignified position in which you are wont to perceive me. No rigor mortis holds my limbs within its rigid grasp. I jump and frolic gaily on and if I claim old age as mine, my actions all betray me. Good friends, do not wonder at this portrait fine, which I have painted for you. The lime-light shines upon my face, albeit, I am modest. I salute you all and invite you all to try my advice included in the little book named herewith: "Page's Pamphlet of Pointers for Putting People on the Proper Path to Perfection." Price One Penny. Personal Guarantee of the Practicability of this Production.

(Owing to a promise made by one of the board, the editors have been compelled, against their will, to publish this effusion.)—Ed.

Prof. P-k-ns—What instrument depends on a bar of iron fastened at one end?

(Applause from class.)

Now Then, Trinity!

I.

We want to raise a cheer you can hear a mile,
And wave the flag that's bound to be victorious;
We want to cheer for something that's worth our while,
And shout a name that rings forever glorious;
A stainless flag, an ancient name, a line of famous sons,
Oh, where's the college dares to make the claim?
We know the place, we've all been there,
And Trinity, yes, Trinity's her name!

II.

We'll pledge her by Connecticut's verdant strand,
We'll pledge again where sparkling wine is flowing;
We'll sing her songs and shoulder to shoulder stand,
And here's a thing or two that's worth your knowing:
Old Trinity stands ever in the forefront of the fight,
And there the blue and gold we'll wear with pride;
Transcending all they soar on high, "Laudamus Trinitatem!" cry,
And spread abroad her fame on every side.

CHORUS:

Now then, Trinity!
Cheer your Alma Mater with a will!
A "long Trin" and three times three,
Cheer the little college on the hill;
Now then, Trinity!
All her loyal sons proclaim her story;
Bright unfold
Blue and gold;
Trinity hearts are true, and
We're the boys that help her on to glory!

—E. G. B.

[Parody sung by Philip E. Curtis, at the mid-year concert February 15, 1906.]

AIR:—"If It's Good Enough for Others It's Good Enough for Me."

I.

I went down on the football field
As cold as I could be,
And there I saw a sweater-coat
With a big yellow "T",
And as I slipped into that coat
I heard the manager scream,
"Look out, you cannot wear the coat
Of the captain of the team."

CHORUS:

Well, if it's good enough for "Landy"
It's good enough for me,
And I am not particular,
As you can plainly see.
As president of the Bridge Whist Club
I've surely won my "T".
If it's good enough for "Fiskie"
It's good enough for me.

II.

I saw one day, in rushing time,
Down by the corner stand,
A youthful looking stranger with
A suit case in his hand.
A chap rushed out to pick him up
And begged him to stop off.
Said he, "I really can't, you know.
I am the history prof."

CHORUS:

Well, if it's good enough for Barbour
It's good enough for me.
So I've been taking history,
Yea, even history three.
I never rushed "Doc" Shearer,
But he's been rushing me,
If it's good enough for Barbour,
It's good enough for me.

III.

I went inside the chapel door
And there, beside the aisle,
I saw a pew upholstered in
The most exquisite style.
And as I slipped into that pew,
And to my sleep gave vent,
I heard the voice of Robert say,
"That's for the president."

CHORUS:

Well, if it's good enough for —————
It's good enough for me,
And I am not particular,
As you can plainly see.
If he will make me come here, *
And, without consulting me,
If it's good enough for —————
It's good enough for me.

IV.

I went to see the treasurer,
And there, before my eyes,
I saw six hundred dollars
Meant for the Holland Prize.
I slipped that gold into my coat,
And started out to pass,
The typewriter said, "Look out, that's for
The first man in the class."

CHORUS:

Well, if it's good enough for Cowper,
It's good enough for me,
And I am not particular,
As you can plainly see.
If I should take cinch courses,
I could stand as well as he.
If it's good enough for Cowper,
It's good enough for me.

An Invocation.

I.

Come Melancholy sit by me
And help me think, for you can be
The cure to all the misery
That I am heir to.

II.

Come Melancholy, come and show
The path in which I ought to go,
For Joy and Duty are too slow;
They do not dare to.

III.

Come Melancholy, I choose you,
To give me counsel, wise and true;
I might ask Luck and Pleasure, too,
They do not care to.

IV.

These only care to be with me,
When I am with Frivolity,
But you, good, wise Melancholy,
I cannot spare you.

—W. S. W. FISKE '06.

Probation.

What is it makes the runner pause
When just about to start?
What is that dread and awful clause
That rends our team apart?

What is it makes the singer stop?
The opening note is struck.
What is it makes the ball team hop,
And rave and curse its luck?

One little word did this foul deed
That was their ruination,
And may our language soon be freed
From that cruel word—probation.

—M. T. '08.

Prof. P-k-n (after fussing over an organ pipe for sometime in vain endeavor to amuse the class. The pipe refuses to squeak)—The trouble is, nothing fits anything else. Anyway, the principle remains the same.

Prof. J-s-n—Cunningham, what does cicatrice mean?

Cunningham—A kind of cockroach.

Prof. J-s-n—Lord! Look it up. What were you thinking of, coca-trice?

Cunningham—Yes sir.

Prof. J-s-n—There's no such word.

ACT. I

SCENE—The stage of a small town hall with scenery of an Italian landscape or a minute reproduction of the kitchen in the second act of "Why He Left Her." About fifteen dilapidated chairs are grouped at rear of stage. A cottage piano is down R.F., also a camp stool. The piano should be completely unstrung. Note—If wished, the scene can represent the platform of a church with its priestly furniture removed. In this case it is highly desirable to have the piano about fifty feet from the stage in the most inaccessible place and position possible. It is about 9.55 P. M. As the curtain rises the struggle that has been going on between Cunningham, Naylor, Wolfe, Goodrich, Henshaw and Harriman, as to who shall play his piece on the piano, is suddenly stopped. There is a pause of thirty minutes during which wild shouts and cries are heard off stage. Finally a voice rises above the uproar which gradually subsides.

GATESON (without) Come on Glee Club, you.

(Tumult begins again with redoubled violence. Cries of, "Where's Hyde?", "Who's seen Zoubeck?", etc., etc.")

CURTIS (without) Don't you think that you had better begin to tune up, Wolfie?

(Unprintable response from the leader of the Mandolin Club.)

XANDERS (without) I want to go home. (Sobs.)

REHR (without) What's the matter? This way Glee Club.

(The door at left bursts open and Gateson enters bowing and smiling. He goes to right of stage, followed by Cunningham.)

UNRECOGNIZABLE VOICE (without) Go on in, you dubs.

GATESON. Come on now, you.

CUNNINGHAM. Ah, come on in here.

(Corps de Ballet enter reluctantly and languidly group themselves about the leader. Simultaneously deciding that he is not in the right place each man effects a change thus giving a delightful kaleidoscopic result)

GATESON. Bunch up, you.

BUTLER. Come on front, fellows, so they can hear.

(The entire mass moves down stage. It finally seems to have become fixed when a loud noise is heard off stage. Henshaw sprints in and after a few personal encounters makes the van. Cunningham saunters over to the piano and impressively strikes the lowest note on the keyboard three times in a questioning manner.)

GATESON. ouououououou...

(He shakes his head slowly up and down.)

Entire Chorus. ououououou

GATESON. Wait a minute, you. ouououououou...

(Butler dashes out of the ranks and hurls Cunningham from the piano. He then plays Chopin, opi 124-548 inclusive.)

CUNNINGHAM. Ah, go on, Butler.

GATESON. Now, you. ououou... Shut up, Xan, you. ouououou...

REHR. That's too high, Billie.

GATESON. Now look it, you. ouououou... Got it, you? ouououou...

(He brings his head up and down ten times. At the eleventh lap all sing.)

Entire Chorus (singing).

Need tee eels up on cold twenty-three.

Need tee eels up on queer cold twenty-three.

O ees seldom he eat.

In tee moon right so beat.

Need tee eels up on cold twenty-three.

(This is repeated twenty-five times.)

GATESON. Now, you.

(All run violently from the stage with the exception of Curtis who is not on the program for anything but thinks he sees a chance.)

CURTIS (in a witheringly sarcastic way). Ladies and gentlemen—though none of you look like it—the Mandolin Club will now begin to tune up. (Exit.)

(From left enters DeMauriac. He holds a mandolin firmly with one hand. He looks contemptuously at the audience then goes over and throws a chair across the stage.) (Exit.)

CURTIS (without) Have you tuned up yet, Wolfie?

(Cries without, "Where's the blue book?" After an interval of fifteen minutes DeMauriac enters followed by his adherents. They bring the chairs to the front of the stage and arrange them in a semi-circle. Then each man stands in front of his chair and, led by DeMauriac, stares for five minutes at the audience with utter loathing and disgust. At a signal from the leader they seat themselves.)

FERGUSON (starting up) I left my guitar in the station.

(He dashes wildly out followed by Buck. In forty-five minutes they return and resume their seats.)

MCGINLEY (stolidly but in a loud voice) What are we going to play for an encore?

DEMAURIA (coolly) If that was meant for a joke, well and good, but if not there is something infinitely pathetic about it.

(Suddenly every one begins playing with the greatest animation. Buck decides that he has been insulted and goes out. At the end of the selection everyone stands up but no move is made to leave the stage. Seating themselves they play in rapid succession all the unpopular songs of the day. With a last scornful look at the audience they kick the chairs over and file out. Enter Butler and Harriman. Four porters follow, each with a large trunk marked conspicuously, "Nevin", "Old Irish Songs", "Ralph Waldo Emerson", and "Vocal Gems".)

BUTLER (advancing with a smile that takes in the entire audience and warms each heart) Ladies and Gentlemen, the first seventy selections will be (he unlocks the trunk marked "Ralph Waldo Emerson" and hands Harriman an armful of music) the complete works of Ethelbert Nevin.

CURTIS (without) Aren't you going to tune up, Wolfie?

(Butler sings "Pretty Screecher" accompanied by Harriman who is unconsciously handicapped from the start by the fact that he is playing "Moon Dear." The sixty-nine selections go off in the same snappy way nor do the succeeding two hundred modest encores lose by comparison. Butler makes these very effective by singling out some poor old woman in the audience and making faces at her until she goes into spasms. Exeunt Butler and Harriman. Enter Rehr, very pale. He retreats to the extreme left of the stage and vainly endeavors to hide his hands.)

REHR (nervously) There aint going to be no violin.
(He rushes off.)

XANDERS (without and sobbing frantically) I want to go home.
Someone pinched me and I can't play ball to-morrow. I want to go home.

MERCKLEIN (without and tenderly) There, there, there.

CURTIS (without) It's about time you began to tune up, Wolfie.

GATESON (without) Come on Glee Club, you.

Slow Curtain.

Ralph R. Wolfe.

Grazie.

Before leaving our active duties behind us, we wish to thank most heartily all those who have given us their support in this work. Without this support, we should have been facing a hopeless task, wherefore our appreciation of it is only limited by the general inability of human minds to appreciate fully the blessings vouchsafed to them. Again we thank you and we leave this work with a sincere hope that it may find some favor in your eyes and that you will have no cause to regret that you gave us your support.

Trinity College

HARTFORD, CONN.

COMPREHENSIVE LIBRARY at all times open to students for study in Languages, Literature, History, Economics, Philosophy, Mathematics, and the Sciences.

Thoroughly equipped Laboratories for work in Chemistry, Natural History, Physics, and Electrical Engineering.

Elementary and Advanced Courses in Civil Engineering.

The principal building of Trinity College is 653 feet long, in the English secular Gothic style. At right angles with it, on the south, are the Observatory, the new Hall of Natural History, and the Jarvis Laboratories for Chemistry and for Physics. To the north of it are the Gymnasium, houses of the President and Professors, and Chapter Houses of the Fraternities.

Below the College Campus to the east, and within three minutes' walk, an Athletic Field has recently been completed, including football fields, a baseball diamond, and a quarter-mile running track.

In beauty of situation, healthful conditions of life, and equipment for its work, the College is not surpassed.

The College has separate courses in Arts, in Science, in Letters and Science, and in Letters.

The Faculty includes seventeen professors, five instructors, a librarian, and a medical director.

Among the elective studies within the respective courses there is no important subject for which adequate provision is not made.

Properly qualified candidates not desiring to pursue all the studies of any course are allowed as Special Students to pursue selected subjects, receiving certificates of satisfactory work.

The Library contains 50,000 volumes and over 29,000 pamphlets. Generous contributions of the Alumni and others are making possible a rapid addition to its resources.

A Reference Reading Room is open during the day and the evening.

There are about fifty scholarships for the aid of necessitous students. The three Holland Scholarships, yielding each $600 per annum, are awarded to the three best students in the three lower classes respectively. The Russell Graduate Fellowship of $400 is awarded biennially. The Mary A. Terry Graduate Fellowship of $400 is awarded annually. Prizes to the amount of $500 are also awarded to undergraduates for success in the work of the various departments.

Two examinations for admission are held at the College in each year, the first during the week of the Annual Commencement, June 28, 29, 30, and the second in September, immediately before the beginning of the Christmas Term, September 24-27.

Candidates from accredited schools are admitted by certificate in most of the departments included in the requirements for entrance.

For Catalogue, Examination Papers, or information apply to the president or to the Secretary of the Faculty.

April 7th—It is rumored around college that the history class is to have a recitation.
